

Mary Rutan investigating illness

Written by Joel E. Mast

Sunday, 24 May 2009

Mary Rutan Hospital officials are looking into a non-communicable illness that affected two women in the maternity ward Friday.

Dr. Grant Varian M.D., director of medicine at the hospital, said the hospital contacted state health and the Center for Disease Control and both entities believe the incidents are not a threat to public health.

MRH hopes to have more information on Monday.

Dr. Varian cautioned it could take some time to complete the hospital's investigation.

Contact e-mail: jmast@examiner.org